Concept to Launch

1

Self Efficacy

Noticing (confidence in ability to notice, be aware of and realise bullying when they see it)

Understanding it as an emergency (confidence in ability to know that help is needed)

Take responsibility (confidence to be able to respond, take personal responsibility to act or speak out or tell someone)

Know what to do (confidence to know what action to take, where and who to report it to)

Take action (confidence to actually do it)

Articles, quizzes, case studies, activities and other content in TOZI touches on these self efficacy points to encourage taking action to REPORT bullying when users see it

2

Theory of Planned Behaviour

Attitudes

Perceived Control

Subjective Norms

Intention

Behaviour

We want to promote positive attitudes towards online safety.

We want users to know they can DO something about bullying (intention and perceived control).

But in order to do that they need to know that a world with bullying in it is not acceptable (subjective norms).

TOZI helps them develop their online safety skills to make that world a nicer place for everyone (behaviour).

3

Psychological Wellbeing

Guided Journals

We know that TOZI users have interests, have a lot to say, and can be very busy people. The gratitude journal and other journalling types we have in TOZI brings these interests and the experience of their lives into the App

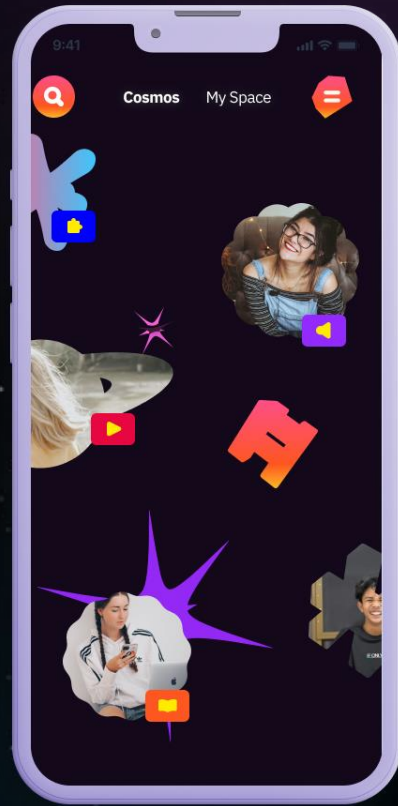

We draw from positive psychology to use this functionality to promote wellbeing, happiness, and the positive aspects of their development and experience

Feels

We know that young people 11-14 are in adolescence and are more aware that the world around them affects their feelings, moods, and thinking.

We use "Feels" as a metaphor to allow users to connect more with their moods, feelings and thinking in a non-clinical but fun space

Cosmos

Dive into a Cosmos of content. With tips & advice on online wellbeing.

My Space

Check into My Space and Chill out. Track your thoughts and feelings.
